

Anxiety

What is Anxiety?

While everyone worries sometimes, people with anxiety have lots of extra worries that get in the way of life at home, school, or with friends.

Children and teens can have anxiety about many things. Some examples are school, friends, being perfect, changes in routines, or being apart from their family.

Some children may get headaches or bellyaches with anxiety. Anxiety can look different for every child.

How to Support Your Child

Children with anxiety may need treatment like Cognitive Behavioral Therapy or medication. Talk to your doctor about your child's needs.

Talk to your child and create opportunities for your child to talk to you.

Help your child start to do things that seem hard. Break big challenges up into small pieces.

Support your child with praise for brave behaviors. Praise their effort ("I know this is tough, but you can do it." "You are being so brave!").

Encourage your child's positive coping and relaxation skills, like deep breathing, counting to five, or taking a break.

Good sleep, exercise, and a healthy diet are important for overall health.

Need Help?

If your family needs more help, talk to your doctor.

If your family needs a mental health provider, call the phone number on the back of your child's insurance card. Ask for a list of covered mental health providers in your area, or search for providers on your insurance website.

Scan below or click here for more information about how to find a mental health provider and how to get help in a crisis.

Pediatric Health Network

 Children's National